

IBIOL

EXTERNAL SEMINAR

19 MARCH 2026

12:15–13:15

ROOM F200

Heike Lindner

University of Bern

Impact on organic carbon mobilization and greenhouse gas emissions

Succulent plants have evolved anatomical and physiological characteristics that enabled their expansion into arid environments. Here, we use the leaf succulent Kalanchoë laxiflora, a constitutive CAM plant with a developmental transition from C3 photosynthesis in young leaves to CAM photosynthesis in mature leaves. This transition enabled the detailed description of anatomical, physiological, and metabolic differences between C3 and CAM leaves within a single plant individual.