2021 Water-Earth Systems PhD School conference

Date: Monday, 29th of November 2021, 09h30-17h

Location: EAWAG (Dübendorf)

Dear all,

After a break of one year due to COVID, we're very happy to announce that this year we are again able to organize our annual Water-Earth Systems PhD school conference. This year the conference will be hosted by EAWAG in Dübendorf.

The goal of the one-day conference is to promote exchange and interdisciplinary collaboration among the PhD student members of the different institutions that participate in the PhD school, and to stimulate interactions of PhD students with senior researchers.

PhD students are asked to present their current work, or a part of it, either in a talk (15min talk + 5min discussion) or in poster form. Since the research conducted by the members of the school covers a range of different subdisciplines within the wider domain of hydrogeology, we ask you to make your talk or poster as comprehensive as possible also for people outside of your specific discipline.

While we do take the unusual COVID situation into account, participation in the annual conference is in principle mandatory for all PhD students of the PhD school. Please submit an abstract using the distributed template to the PhD school coordinator by the 4th of October.

Abstracts have to be max. 250 words, written in English and may contain one figure. When registering for the event and sending the abstract, please specify whether you will give a talk or present a poster. Once we have received your abstracts, we will schedule the talks and, if we do not receive a reasonable amount of proposed talks, decide if we may ask some students who suggested a poster to give talks instead. Posters will preferentially be given to first year PhD students and senior PhD students are asked to give talks. Since the conference will take place after Swiss Geoscience Meeting and before the AGU fall meeting, this is a good opportunity to present your SGM
